The emergence of the Southern Maritime Zone

A new shift in the maritime industry is taking place from north to south, Sri Lanka emerging as the Indian Ocean's important new maritime hub and the Government of Sri Lanka is rapidly positioning itself as a dynamic part of a 'Southern maritime zone', following the rise of Singapore and Dubai.

With a steadily growing economy, big port projects already underway and significant other infrastructure developments planned, the country is well placed to capitalise on its fortunate geographical location and take advantage of the fast growing Indian and Chinese economies.

However, the door is still very much open to all international investors and partners! Sri Lanka's mission is to continue the momentum to become an integral part of South Asia's drive to position itself as one of the most important global economic areas.
